Flight Safety Research

BY MAJ. GEN. VICTOR E. BERTRANDIAS,
USAF

Director, Flight Safety Research,
The Inspector General

AIRCRAFT accident prevention—the preservation of lives and equipment—has always been a cardinal consideration in the United States Air Force. And today more than ever before there is a need for unceasing efforts in flight safety. Increasing tension in international affairs, to include armed conflict, has placed a premium on trained crews and equipment. At the same time, modern aircraft in flying higher and faster with greater loads have presented new problems to the flight safety engineer. Keeping pace with increased performance is an increased complexity of aircraft and equipment. Every new development creates a new field of potential accident causes.

The solving of these new problems has required new methods and new ideas for accident prevention. To this end the Air Force has established under The Inspector General the Directorate of Flight Safety Research which began operations in March of this year at a new location under a new concept.

Located at Norton Air Force Base in San Bernardino, Calif., the Directorate of Flight Safety Research is near the heart of aviation industry and research centers. It was no accident that Flight Safety was moved from the east coast to California. At its new location, Flight Safety has at hand all the assembled aviation experience necessary to do its job quickly and efficiently.

In the Directorate are top-flight engineers and research psychologists working hand in hand with military officers and representatives of civilian aircraft industry. This cooperative effort guarantees a healthy interchange of information vital to the production of safe machines and safe practices.

Flight safety is a broad program with many ramifications. Among the problems which must be dealt with are those related to the pilot, to aptitudes and abilities, training, personality factors, fatigue, maintenance procedures, operations, weather data, instrument flying, and many others. Accident prevention has been placed on an engineering basis, guided by research and implemented by sound corrective action in the elimination of potential accident causes.

WO Promotion Plan To Go To Congress

The Department of Defense this week disclosed Personnel Policy Board approval, long pending, of 12 "general policies" concerning implementation of the warrant officer program.

Simultaneously, from other sources, it was learned that related legislation, promising to liberalize considerably the current rigid restrictions on the number of top grade warrant officer appointments, will reach the Capitol shortly after the opening of the 82d Congress.

When the revised warrant officer program, including the legislation is adopted, provision will have been made for all qualified warrant officers to reach the top pay grade, W-4, equivalent to the rank of major, prior to retirement for age or length of service.

This would mark a notable advance in the belated implementation of Congressional intentions in approving the four warrant officer pay grades in the Career Compensation Act.

The arbitrary restrictions now in effect relative to the number of warrant officers authorized to serve in the W-4 and W-3 grades have been a target for constant criticism.

When the Department of Defense, then engaged in a drastic economy program, announced early in June that solely on the basis of budget limitations—without regard to the merit of eligible warrant officers—promotions to W-4 and W-3 would be limited to 3 and 7 per cent, respectively, of the planned warrant officer strength of 30 June, 1950, THE JOURNAL protested editorially.

In a 10 June editorial, THE JOURNAL held that "these officers, highly important in the efficient administration of the Military Establishment, are denied the pay increases the Congress had approved for them. The Personnel Policy Board should immediately act to unblock the promotions, and the Defense Department should request the Congress to provide sufficient funds to cover the pay raises."

Early in July, after he had placed THE JOURNAL's warrant officer editorial in the Congressional Record, Representative Pat Sutton (D-Tenn.), who had fought for more specific warrant officer provisions in the 1949 pay bill, declared on the floor of the House that "we are still charged by all the rules of moral obligation not to forget those seemingly forgotten men of the Armed Services—the warrant and commissioned warrant officers."

Representative Sutton, who was a Navy officer during World War II, called for remedial action to raise the number of warrant officer appointments in the top two grades and asserted: "I now give notice that, if I am here during the next Congress, or if the chance occurs before the end of this Congress, I shall introduce legislation which will make those promises good."

Thus, it was held certain this week that if legislation now being drafted by the

USMC Selection Board

A Marine Corps selection board met this week to recommend officers on active duty for temporary promotion to lieutenant colonel.

The Marine Corps said the board "may recommend 262 majors." Of this number, 247 will be unrestricted officers, 14 supply duty officers, and one limited duty officer. The promotion zone in the lineal list extends from Robert W. Glickert to David R. Griffin, inclusive.

Brig. Gen. George F. Good, Jr., Commanding General, Troop Training Unit, Atlantic, is President of the Board, and other members are Colonels Raymond P. Coffman, Alexander W. Kreiser, Jr., Samuel K. Bird, Nels H. Nelson, David M. Shoup, Samuel S. Jack, Alan Sharpey, Robert B. Luckey, Lester S. Hamel, John Wehle and George H. Cloud. The recorder is Lt. Charles R. Livingston.

Adverse Personnel Data

The Army has published a new set of regulations, AR 600-186, designed to afford personnel an opportunity to review and comment on derogatory and anonymous communications of which they otherwise might have no official knowledge.

The action by the Army is certain to be an important morale factor, since in the past there have been instances where personnel have felt that there was not sufficient safeguarding of careers against effects of anonymous letters.

The following is the full text of the new ruling:

1. General.—a. Purpose.—These regulations are designed to safeguard the career of military personnel by affording such individuals an opportunity to review and comment on derogatory and anonymous communications of which they have no prior official knowledge and which, if filed in official records without comment, might reflect adversely on character and professional standing.

b. Applicability.—These regulations are applicable to all personnel in the active military service, retired Regular Army personnel, and personnel of the Organized Reserve Corps and National Guard of the United States subject to call to active duty whose records are on file in the Department of the Army and the Army Field Establishment.

2. Policy.—a. Adverse matter.—No adverse matter shall be made a part of an individual's personnel file maintained in the field or by The Adjutant General without the individual's knowledge and an opportunity being afforded the individual to make a written statement in reply to the allegations or a written declination to make such a statement. The interpretation as to what constitutes adverse matter shall be liberally construed in favor of the individual. In doubtful cases, the procedure outlined in paragraph 3 will be followed.

b. Exceptions.—The following will normally be excluded from consideration under these regulations:

- (1) Medical information.
- (2) Counter intelligence information.
- (3) Records of courts martial and court-martial orders.
- (4) Reprimands and administrative admonishments.

(5) Actions of boards of officers.

(6) Investigative reports, including CID and IG reports.

Increases in Arms Asked by President

In historic statement on the Korean crisis the President on Thursday, 30 Nov., declared emphatically that the forces of the United Nations have no intention of abandoning their mission to stop aggression in Korea. He said our troops are fighting to put down aggression that not only threatens the whole fabric of the United Nations, but "all hopes of peace and justice."

The President said that if aggression succeeded in Korea we may expect it to spread through Asia and Europe to this hemisphere. Hence, the President said, we are fighting to preserve our security and survival.

The statement of the President was made at his weekly news conference and served as a rallying cry for United Nations forces, following the severe reverses suffered in Korea this week as a result of the strong counter-offensive of the Chinese Reds.

The President said we would rapidly increase our military strength to meet the new threat of Communist aggression. He said he would submit supplemental estimates for appropriations needed to increase our Armed Forces, with large amounts for the Atomic Energy Commission and for the expanded Army, Navy and Air Force.

In response to a question the President said that there was continuous consideration of the use of all types of weapons in the current war, including the atom bomb. At first the President indicated that the use of the atom bomb would be left to the decision of the military commanders. However, in a later statement he clarified this by calling attention to the fact that the law specifies that the decision as to the use of the atom bomb must be made by the President. He expressed the hope that it would not be necessary to use this weapon.

As to bombing targets in Manchuria where Chinese Red troops are assembling for movement into Korea, he said the question of Chinese aggression must first be decided by the United Nations, after which the means of combating that aggression would be for military decision.

Answering other queries the President expressed his disapproval of attacks on Secretary of State Dean Acheson by Congressional critics and others. He vigorously denied rumors that Mr. Acheson was interfering with General Douglas MacArthur or seeking his removal. He indicated his disgust with attacks on General MacArthur at home and abroad for his conduct of military operations in Korea. He warmly defended General MacArthur and said the General had not exceeded his authority in starting his offensive in Korea last week.

The formal statement of the President follows:

Recent developments in Korea confront the world with a serious crisis. The Chinese Communist leaders have sent their

Cleveland Plain-Dealer—"The high esteem in which Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is held in Europe as well as in the United States makes him the inevitable choice for commander in chief of the western forces defending the continent... The general has always been a soldier. Maybe in the capacity of chief of the western European forces he can serve civilization better than in any other."

Grand Rapids, Mich., Press—"One of the first questions raised by speculation as to whether Eisenhower would be named concerns his future political status. Despite the general's repeated declarations that he does not intend to run for President in 1952, nobody seems to be counting him out of the race... Eisenhower's availability for the nomination in '52 is likely to be determined by just one thing—the state of the world at that time. If the situation is such that good generals are needed elsewhere, it's a safe guess that that is where Eisenhower will be."

St. Louis Post-Dispatch—"The General's return to active duty will not remove him altogether from the ranks of Republican nomination possibilities for 1952, but it will emphasize his status as a military man and so increase his ineligibility in the minds of those who prefer to keep civilian leadership in civilian hands."

Indianapolis Star—"Isn't it about time the United States told France and Italy and all the 11 Atlantic Pact nations to prove their determination for self defense by starting to rearm, by reaching agreement on a unified force before we give any aid... For if they are not willing to sacrifice, as the American people are sacrificing, to save themselves, there is no reason in the world why we should do anything more to save them."

Louisville Courier-Journal—"Creation of a Western European defense force among the Atlantic Pact nations need not wait upon settlement of the problem of German participation. The plan already outlined which calls for the rearming of 50 divisions and the allocation of air and sea support is at the moment independent of German units."

Atlanta Constitution—"Proper defense of the country and of the Western World no longer can depend upon frantic action, generated by the sudden heat of public opinion in an emergency. It is a long-term affair."

THE WAR IN KOREA

In a swift reversal of the fortunes of war a sudden onslaught by overwhelming numbers of fresh Red Chinese troops, rushed into the conflict from Manchuria, this week drove back United Nations troops from five to twenty miles along the entire 50-mile front in northwestern Korea.

The principal assault of 200,000 Chinese Reds and 70,000 North Koreans was directed against the II South Korean Corps on the right of the line. A sudden night attack by several Chinese divisions in this sector penetrated the advance positions of the South Koreans and forced a general retreat along the entire front.

For several days the situation was confused along much of the front, and for a time there was concern that a grave military disaster impended, with 100,000 United Nations troops on this front seriously threatened. However, late this week the battered South Korean divisions were able to regroup some 20 miles to the rear of the line they held a week ago.

American divisions to the west of the breakthrough were forced to withdraw to protect the exposed right flank. This withdrawal was orderly and was accomplished without severe losses. The military situation was officially described as grave, but not disastrous.

Toward the end of the week the Communist pressure on the United Nations forces in the northwestern front was appreciably lessened, but it increased in the northeastern sector where an estimated 80,000 Chinese Reds faced the X Corps. In this section of the front the United States 1st Marine Division was heavily attacked in the vicinity of the Changjin reservoir, but held its own, though greatly outnumbered. It was being supplied by air.

The great reinforcement of the Chinese Reds for their assault in Korea brought the world face to face with the threat of an imminent new war. In a special communiqué General Douglas MacArthur reported the presence of 200,000 Chinese Reds at the battlefield and declared that future developments depended on decisions to be made in the United Nations and in the "chancelleries of the world."

Events in Korea are viewed with grave concern by the United Nations at Lake Success and by the governments in Washington, London, Paris and elsewhere. Chinese aggression in Korea is regarded as a long step toward a third world war, an eventuality that western diplomats are striving desperately to prevent.

Because of what General MacArthur termed the "privileged sanctuary" of Manchuria the Red government at Peiping is able to assemble and deploy its troops unmolested on the Manchurian side of the border, which is only 50 or 60 miles from the main battlefield. The movement into combat can be accomplished in a few hours under cover of darkness.

As yet there has been no change in the general instructions to General MacArthur, which prevent any air bombardment of lines of communications and troop concentration centers in Manchuria. This is a tremendous advantage to the Chinese Reds and is a corresponding handicap to normal military operations of United Nations forces.

High officials of the Defense Department stated that General MacArthur has not yet asked permission to make air attacks on military installations in Manchuria, but unless there is a marked change in the situation such a request is regarded as probable. Some weeks ago General MacArthur requested authority to pursue attacking Chinese planes across the border, but this permission was denied him in order not to aggravate the delicate diplomatic situation.

In Washington some members of Congress have strongly recommended that General MacArthur be given immediate authority to bomb Red bases in Manchuria, some going so far as to urge the use of the atom bomb. The President said that consideration has been given to employing the atom bomb in the Korean conflict, but that he hoped such a course would not be necessary.

When the seriousness of the military situation became evident early this week the President called a special meeting of the Security Council, which on this occasion was also attended by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Subsequently General Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, briefed the members of the cabinet on the current military situation.

At his news conference last Thursday the President issued a formal statement on the Korean crisis, the text of which is published in this issue.

In Congress members took steps to rush to enactment legislation increasing military appropriations to accelerate mobilization of men and munitions to meet the threat of a new war. Additional funds will also be provided to step up production of the atom bomb, and to develop the new, and much more lethal hydrogen bomb.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson met in closed session with the foreign relations committees of the Senate and the House, and reviewed our foreign policies, particularly with respect to their bearing on the Korean crisis. He is quoted as saying that the Russians may be using the conflict in Asia as a mask for possible new Soviet aggression in Europe. Later he addressed the American people by radio urging unity in this current crisis.

The attack of the Chinese Communists on the northwestern front in Korea brought a sudden halt to the Allied offensive in that sector, which began a week ago, with every prospect that it would bring the Korean War to a quick and successful termination.

During the first two days of the Allied offensive important gains were made along the entire front, with the drive well ahead of schedule. Little opposition was encountered, and there appeared to be no reason to question intelligence reports that the Chinese were executing a planned withdrawal toward the Yalu River on the Manchurian border.

Suddenly the Chinese Reds in great numbers and their North Korean allies made a night attack through rugged mountain country on the right of the line. This portion of the front was held by the South Korean II Corps, composed of the 6th, 7th, and 8th South Korean divisions.

The surprise night assault of the Reds was highly successful. Their lightly armed troops quickly overran the South Korean infantry positions and broke through the supporting artillery. The violence and force of the attack, which was pressed without regard to losses, caused considerable disorganization among the South Koreans and interfered with an orderly withdrawal.

Communications were disrupted and there was great difficulty in determining the nature and extent of the collapse of II South Korean Corps. The American IX Corps, composed of the 2d and 25th Divisions, found its right flank completely exposed to enemy attack and was forced to withdraw several miles. It was a fighting, but an orderly withdrawal.

On the left flank, held by the American I Corps, composed of the American 24th Division and the South Korean 1st Division, the Red attack was largely concentrated on the South Korean Division, which was forced to give considerable ground. This, in turn, necessitated a withdrawal by the 24th division, which pulled back several miles to the Chongchon River, abandoning the city of Chongju, which it had captured early in the ill-starred Allied offensive.

After several days of hard fighting the Eighth Army troops late this week were holding a tenuous line in northwest Korea, from five to a dozen miles south of that from which the short-lived Allied offensive was launched late last week. The most seriously threatened point was on the right where the enemy poured in great numbers through a break 20 miles wide in the South Korean II Corps. Red troops turned westward after the deep penetration in an effort to cut the main supply line and trap large segments of the Eighth Army.

The American 1st Cavalry Division, the Turkish brigade and several tank battalions, which had been held in reserve, were thrown into the breach. Late this week they had slowed the Communist advance and were hopeful of sealing off the penetration.

In the early stages of the counter-offensive the enemy troops had no appreciable artillery or armor to support their attack, and no enemy planes figured in the combat. Their success was attributed to the sheer weight of their overwhelming numbers, and to their skill in night attacks and in the use of mortars and light automatic weapons. Later some enemy tanks exploited the breakthrough, but in relatively small numbers.

Both General MacArthur and Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commanding the Eighth Army, expressed the belief that the United Nations offensive begun late last week had forced the enemy into a premature counter-offensive. They felt that the Chinese Reds had been quietly strengthening their forces for an all-out attack to begin after the Yalu River was frozen sufficiently to support heavy traffic, and when a total of 400,000 Red troops would be available in Korea.

Soon after the enemy breakthrough General MacArthur summoned General Walker and Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, commanding the X Corps, to a midnight conference in Tokyo. At this meeting it is assumed that plans were laid for future tactical and strategic operations in the battle area.

High military officials in Washington indicated that while further withdrawals in Korea might be necessary it was felt that General MacArthur's superiority in air strength and in fire power, with a preponderance of armor and artillery, would ultimately counterbalance the numerical advantage of the Reds, and make it possible to stabilize the situation. It was suggested that a line running 100 miles across the waist of the peninsula from just north of Pyongyang, near the west coast, to a point north of Wonsan, on the east coast, might be successfully defended.

While the main fighting during the week was on the northwestern front three American and two South Korean divisions heavily engaged the enemy in the east and northeast. General Almond said that the enemy in this area had been heavily reinforced by Chinese Reds and now numbered approximately 80,000.

The South Korean Capital Division, supported by U. S. Naval gunfire and American Marine planes, captured the important port of Chongjin, high up on the east coast, and moved several miles north of the city, where it encountered heavy enemy opposition.

In the northeast the American 7th Division, which reached the Yalu River at the Manchurian border last week, turned west to attack enemy troops and lessen the pressure on the main front. It made little progress against strong resistance.

West of the Chongjin reservoir in northeast Korea the American 1st Marine Division encountered several Red Chinese regiments and pinned them down by hard fighting. Farther south the American 3d Division and the South Korean 3d Division moved west from the general vicinity of Wonsan to attack Red forces and thus slow the main drive of the enemy.

The following is the special communiqué issued by General MacArthur relative to the counter-offensive of the Chinese Communists:

Enemy reactions developed in the course of our assault operations of the past four days disclose that a major segment of the Chinese continental armed forces in army, corps and divisional organization of an aggregate strength of over 200,000 men is now arrayed against the United Nations forces in North Korea.

There exists the obvious intent and preparation for support of these forces heavy reinforcements now concentrated within the privileged sanctuary north of the international boundary and constantly moving forward.

Consequently, we face an entirely new war. This has shattered the high hopes we entertained that the intervention of the Chinese was only of a token nature on a volunteer and individual basis as publicly announced and that therefore the war in Korea could be brought to a rapid close by our movement to the international boundary and the prompt withdrawal thereafter of United Nations forces, leaving Korean problems for settlement by the Koreans themselves.

It now appears to have been the enemy's intent in breaking off contact with our forces some two weeks ago to secure the time necessary surreptitiously to build up for a later surprise assault upon our lines in overwhelming force, taking advantage of the freezing of all rivers and roadbeds which would have materially reduced the effectiveness of our air interdiction and permitted a greatly accelerated forward movement of enemy reinforcements and supplies.

This plan has been disrupted by our own offensive action, which forced upon the enemy a premature engagement.

This situation, repugnant as it may be, poses issues beyond the authority of the United Nations Military Council—issues which must find their solution within

An Enduring Defense

Pointing out that the history of our National Defense has been a succession of feasts and famines, Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall on 24 Nov. urged the establishment of an "enduring system" of National Defense.

General Marshall spoke at a dinner in honor of Erle Cocke, newly elected National Commander. The dinner was held at Ft. Benning, Ga.

The Secretary took the occasion to discuss our military history and its sad series of expansion and contraction in the size of our defense forces. He said:

"It is both natural and a happy circumstance that we have come to Fort Benning today to express our affection for Erle Cocke and our faith in his leadership as National Commander of the American Legion.

"It is very natural because Fort Benning is the home of the Infantry School and Erle Cocke one of its most distinguished graduates. It was the battle performance of company officers like him that gave this school its great reputation.

"Not merely as Secretary of Defense, but as a doughboy of long standing and one time director of this Infantry School I have a personal pride in Erle Cocke and in the quality of leadership he displayed in combat. I predict for him an unusually successful administration as National Commander of the American Legion.

"This meeting is fortuitous because it gives me the opportunity to make some observations on our military history, which I hope the National Commander of the Legion and his people will take to heart.

"The history of National Defense in this country has been a succession of feasts and famines, that have followed each other in demoralizing sequence. For a nation that prides itself on its logic, business precept and its practical common sense, we have given the world quite an opposite impression of these qualities when it came to the matter of National Defense. Speaking frankly, I fear that we have given a demonstration somewhat of emotional instability.

"Consider the history of National Defense in your own lifetime, particularly in the lifetime of those of you who are veterans of the first World War. There was the unpreparedness of 1916, the magnificent Army and Navy of 1917-18, the demobilization of 1919, the attempt to set up an enduring system of National Defense in 1920, followed quickly by its emasculation in the twenties and thirties, the sudden resurrection in 1939, the rise to world preeminence in the second World War, and an almost violent dip to a new low in the midst of a dangerous world. The drastic demobilization that followed the cessation of hostilities in 1945 is now succeeded by a long swing of the pendulum back to the demand for the immediate build up of great strength.

"It is always when our National Defense is weakest that we most feel its need. I recall in 1947, as Secretary of State when our country urgently needed military strength to support our international responsibilities. I found that my position was supported by but one and one-third Infantry divisions in this country available for duty. Yet, as some of you may recall, I was being urged from many sides to pour it on the Soviets and give them hell.

"Despite the failings I have just referred to in our swings toward stronger National Defense we have hung up amazing records, in making up for lost time. Our great resources, our varied and abundant skills, and our dynamic spirit once geared into action accomplished miracles. But always the cost was great, much of which could have been avoided with a little prudent foresight. And always the aftermath of the battle was followed by recriminations, investigations, and demands for accounting—an accounting for precious lives that might have been saved, for money and resources that might have been used to better advantage, for waste that might have been avoided. And always there has been a drive to find scapegoats to shoulder the blame. The basic error, however, has always been with the American people themselves. The fault has been their refusal to sanction an enduring posture of defense that would discourage aggression, and if war came, would reduce the casualties, the sacrifices, the excessive costs, and the needless waste.

"This alternate cycle of strength and weakness in National Defense must stop. No longer can we count upon years or even months in which to prepare after the war is on. In Korea for the first time we were called upon to fight the first day. That will certainly be the case hereafter. At best we are to face a period of tension of long duration. We must grow stronger to defend ourselves against the risk of aggression wherever it may develop.

"We must work, and hope, and not merely pray that we can avoid another World War. Our people are ready to give our Armed Forces what they need. They will sacrifice. They will produce. They will give us the men and munitions we need. They will probably break many new speed records.

"But what then? What will happen after this immediate crisis passes and we are involved in a long and less spectacular tension? Will we again lapse into weakness, an invitation to trouble or will we read the warning of history and set up a system of defense consistent with our democratic ideals, a system which will give us enduring security in peace and the immediately available potential strength we need for war, if war becomes necessary?

I know which of these alternatives Erle Cocke will favor. I am confident that the American Legion will line up solidly behind him. Let us, therefore, take the time now and make the effort during his administration to set up an enduring system of National Defense, a system that will not collapse at every change of wind and temperature, a system that will keep us prepared for any emergency, yet will not sap the economic strength which is of maximum importance to the democratic people of the entire world."

Combat Pay

Steadily rising casualty lists, horrible weather conditions and finally the intervention of the Chinese communists this week reemphasized Congressional interest in passage of legislation providing combat pay for ground force troops and other Armed Forces personnel in action against the enemy in Korea.

Defense officials reported that the proposed legislation is "under active top-level study," but they declined to forecast when the measure would reach the Bureau of the Budget for final clearance before introduction in Congress.

There is the possibility, however, that some legislators may become impatient at any prolonged delay in this matter and will take the matter into their own hands.

But since the present session of Congress will be so limited in time, there is the danger that the legislation may not be acted upon until the 82d Congress convenes in January.

Meantime, Senator Tom Connolly (D-Tex.), has released the text of a communication sent him by the Army following his inquiry regarding progress on the combat pay issue.

The text of that letter follows:

"This letter is in further reference to your recent communication to the Secretary of Defense expressing interest in Combat Service Pay for Infantry personnel, as advocated by Oscar C. Dancy, County Judge of Cameron County, Brownsville, Tex., forwarded to the Department of the Army for consideration and direct reply to you.

"The Department of the Army recognizes the plight of the infantrymen who in past wars, and in the European operation, have borne the brunt of the fighting. We intend to do everything possible to give the deserved recognition and compensation to those combat fighters upon whom the success of all our military effort ultimately depends.

"From the standpoint of extra compensation for the combat fighter, the Army has prepared and submitted to the Department of Defense a proposal to ask Congress for extra pay for each month of combat duty in Korea. The Department of Defense has indicated considerable interest and we anticipate early submission of the proposal to Congress."

"I trust the information furnished above may be helpful to you in advising your constituent.

"(Signed) C. G. Blakeney,
"Colonel, GSC,
"Office, Chief of Legislative Liaison."

It was not certain late this week what final form the Defense legislation will take. Speculation has been voiced that the combat pay would be $100 a month for officers and $50 a month for enlisted personnel. However, unofficially it has been reported that General of the Army Douglas MacArthur recommended a flat monthly payment of equal amount to all personnel.

As this matter was being resolved at the Department of Defense level, the 14th summary of U. S. casualties, released on 30 Nov. and covering notifications of next of kin through midnight, 24 Nov., showed that there have been a total of 31,028 casualties, of which 26,627 were Army; 3,829 Marine Corps; 328 Navy; and 244 Air Force.

Of the 5,307 total deaths, 4,442 were Army, 725 Marine Corps, 50 Navy and 90 Air Force.

No Retired Recalls

Army officials reiterated this week an earlier statement that there is no plan under active consideration for recalling retired personnel. Asked by THE JOURNAL if new developments in Korea had resulted in modification of such policies, an Army spokesman said the previous decision not to recall these persons still stands.

Committees Mark Time

Although the 81st Congress resumed its session on 27 November, the Senate and House Committees on Armed Services marked time this week, awaiting requests for defense legislation from the President and the Department of Defense. Neither committee has announced an agenda for the present session.

Expected hearings by the House committee on the organization of the Air Force have been delayed by the death of the wife of Chairman Vinson, and it is possible these hearings will not start until the 82d Congress opens in January.

A meeting of the House committee has been appointed for next Monday, 4 Dec., when the Department of Defense and the chairman of the Central Intelligence Agency are scheduled to provide a briefing on present defense conditions.

A meeting for the same purpose was held by the Senate committee 29 Nov., when Deputy Defense Secretary Lovett and Lt. Gen. Albert M. Gruenthal, Deputy Chief of Staff for Plans, Army reported.

A special subcommittee of the Senate committee will start hearings on 4 Dec. on stock piling of materials needed for defense purposes.

At a news conference held by Chairman Millard Tydings at the conclusion of the 29 Nov. session of the committee, Senator Tydings said it would be his last meeting with the newsmen (having been defeated for reelection) and used the occasion to thank the members of the press "for their courtesy, fairness, and friendship."

Would Remove Travel Tax

Legislation to waive the 15 per cent Federal tax on transportation for servicemen on leave and furlough, providing the carriers reduce their fare on this travel as was done in World War II, was introduced in Congress this week by Representative Jacob K. Javits (R-L, NY).

The New York Congressman declared that "I am certain that once this bill becomes law the nation's great carriers will, as they patriotically did in the last war, reduce fares for service people on leave."

Pointing out that "there are some 1,700,000 men and women in the service today and inductions are proceeding at a rate of approximately 50,000 a month in addition to the still large number of reservists being recalled to active duty," Congressman Javits said, "there is no reason why these men and women should not enjoy the same reduced furlough rates as did service people in World War II."

"The situation of military mobilization that we face today is certainly insofar as its impact on the servicemen and their families the same situation we faced in World War II," he added.

"This bill, I believe, is one of those vital measures that the Congress can well enact during the present short session and I am urging the Committee on Ways and Means to give it immediate attention. I am certain that once this bill becomes law the nation's great carriers will, as they patriotically did in the last war, reduce fares for service people on leave."

The exception of the transportation tax on tickets sold at furlough rates contained in Section 3469(f) of the Internal Revenue Act expired on 31 Dec. 1947.

AF Reserve Canvass

The Air Force said this week that the canvass of reserve personnel as to desires concerning relief from active duty is continuing. Initial reports from commands are required no later than 15 Jan. 1951, with monthly reports thereafter. Canvassing is being conducted on the following basis:

1. Officers are being queried as follows:
a. Do you desire to serve unexpired period of one year from date of termination or present active duty tour, or desire release as soon as trained replacement can be furnished?

b. Do you desire to change from involuntary status to voluntary indefinite? Indefinite is defined as without specified termination date.

Seventh Army Staff

Deactivated 31 March 1946 after a brilliant record during the war in Europe, the Seventh Army was reactivated, with headquarters at Stuttgart, Germany, on 24 Nov., under command of Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, USA, Commanding General, U. S. Army, Europe, under General Thomas T. Handy, USA, Commander-in-Chief, European Command.

Simultaneously, Headquarters, U. S. Constabulary, was deactivated, as the Constabulary and the 1st Infantry Division, veteran major American tactical units in Europe, were assigned to the Seventh Army.

Creation of the Seventh Army was seen as a forerunner of the buildup of American forces in Europe and reflects the increasing adaptation of the Constabulary from fundamentally a policing unit to a tactical organization.

Speculation has been expressed that the Constabulary will be reorganized into an armored division.

General Eddy, who during the war was Commanding General of the 9th Infantry Division and later, the XII Army Corps, will have the following staff for the Seventh Army: Maj. Gen. I. D. White, former Commanding General of the U. S. Constabulary, Deputy Commander; Brig. Gen. J. M. Lentz, formerly Chief of Staff of the First Division, Chief of Staff; Col. M. McClure, formerly Deputy Director of the European Command Personnel and Administration Division, G-1; Brig. Gen. R. C. Partridge, until recently Deputy Director of the European Command Intelligence Division, G-2; Col. B. Gjelsteen, formerly Deputy Director of the European Command Operations, Plans, Organization and Training Division, G-3, and Col. E. McGinley, former Deputy Post Commander of the Frankfurt Military Post, G-4.

Honor General Huebner

Lt. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner, wartime commander of the 1st Infantry Division and the 5th Army Corps, and postwar Commander of the U. S. Army in Europe, reached retirement age on 30 Nov.

Farewell ceremonies began 28 Nov. when General Huebner was greeted by President Truman in a White House ceremony and were climaxed Friday morning when the Army Commander was given an honor escort to the gates of Fort Myer, Va., and returned to civilian life in a traditional Army program.

Highlighting the events was a reception for General and Mrs. Huebner by the Army Chief of Staff, General J. Lawton Collins, and Mrs. Collins. The reception at the Fort McNair Officers' Club was attended by approximately 600 persons.

In the White House ceremony, General Huebner presented President Truman a plated U. S. Army carbine bearing the inscription: "To Our Commander-in-Chief Harry S. Truman, from the U. S. Forces in Europe." The token was prepared in Europe and returned here by General Huebner for presentation to the President. General Huebner was accompanied to the White House by General Collins.

The Ft. Myer ceremonies marking his return to civilian life will end a long Army career for General Huebner which began when he enlisted in the Regular Army on 17 Jan. 1910. He served successively as a private, corporal, sergeant, quartermaster sergeant, and regimental supply sergeant in the 18th Infantry until 26 Nov. 1916, when he was commissioned as a second lieutenant.

During World War I, General Huebner went to France in June, 1917, in command of a company of the 28th Infantry, 1st Infantry Division. He remained with the 1st Division throughout the war, serving at the front in the Luneville sector south of Nancy, France; the Beaumont sector, north of Toul, in which he was wounded in action; the Cantigny sector; the Aisne-Marne offensive, in which he was again wounded; the Saizerais sector, and the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives.

Following various assignments, General Huebner was assigned to the North African theater of operations in March 1943 during World War II, and assumed command of the 1st Infantry Division. He commanded the division in its operation in the Normandy landings at Omaha Beach and in the battles of St. Lo and Mortain and the reduction of the Falaise pocket.

He then led the division across the Seine and advanced north to participate in the battles of Mons, Aachen and the Hurtgen Forest. In January 1945 he assumed command of the 5th Corps and led it in its advance across the Rhine to the Elbe where the first contact was made with the Russians at Torgau in April 1945.

After a brief respite in the United States, General Huebner returned overseas in August 1946, eventually to become the Commanding General, U. S. Army in Europe, a position he held until he was relieved by Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, former Commandant of the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., in order that he might retire.

Following his retirement, General Huebner plans to remain in Washington, D. C. He is a native of Bushton, Kans.

Medical Care of Dependents

The Navy has announced the revision of the Navy and Marine Dependent's Identification Card for hospitalization and medical care. The new card is given Form No. NavPers-1343 (New 8-50) and replaces NavMed-562 (2-45).

Commanding officers have been requested to make necessary arrangements for the issuance of the new card upon the request of members of their command having dependents. It was emphasized that personnel should obtain the ID card before an emergency arises so that there will be no delay incident to obtaining a card when a dependent requires medical attention.

It was stated that the old card is currently valid and will continue to be honored until its expiration date.

If it is not possible for the service member to procure and deliver this card to the dependent concerned, the dependent or a person on behalf of the dependent may procure a card from either the Bureau of Naval Personnel or Marine Corps Headquarters as appropriate. It was pointed out, however, that no dependent in possession of an otherwise valid NavMed-562 would be denied medical or hospital care pending the receipt of the revised card.

The issuance of cards also is authorized to Naval personnel retired with pay, including members of the Fleet Reserve entitled to retainer pay, or their dependents. Marine Corps Headquarters will issue cards to their personnel retired with pay or Fleet Marine Reserve entitled to retainer pay, and their dependents.

Unremarried widows of members of the regular service, or of regular or reserve personnel who were entitled to retirement or retainer pay at the time of death, or of reserve members who died on active duty, may procure the card. The Navy stated that the card is void at the time of separation from military service, or on release to inactive duty other than retirement.

Dependents may apply for care at Army or Air Force facilities, if Navy facilities are not available.

Off-Duty Schooling

A career improvement program backed by Navy funds was opened this week to active duty Naval personnel who enroll in certain off-duty courses in accredited civilian schools. Three-quarters of tuition costs up to $7.50 a semester hour will be paid by the Navy under the plan.

Commanding officers have been authorized to approve courses considered helpful to performance of duty or which will add to professional capabilities, the Navy said.

District and river command commanders and force commanders will contract with accredited colleges, universities, junior colleges and high schools for the partial tuition payments. To be eligible, Naval personnel must be on active duty and be reasonably sure that remaining duty at present stations will allow completion of courses. As many as two courses a semester will be allowed.

Metal Pendants Available

Holders of individual Navy Commendation Ribbons issued since 6 Dec., 1941, may now obtain metal pendant for wear with the ribbon. One will be issued to each person, with second and succeeding awards represented by bronze stars placed upon the suspension ribbon, the Navy Bureau of Personnel announced.

Applications for the pendant should be addressed to the Commandant of the Marine Corps or the Chief of Naval Personnel and should include full name and file, service or serial number.

Release Over-Age Marines

The Marine Corps has announced a new policy regarding the release of over-age enlisted Reserve personnel to inactive status.

Personnel who, at the time of enlistment, did not meet the age requirements as contained in the Marine Corps Manual, are authorized assignment to inactive status at their own option.

The age requirements are as follows:
 1—Maximum age for personnel with prior Marine Corps service may not exceed 32 years for men or 36 years for women plus the total Marine Corps service, active and inactive, plus all active service in any other branch of the armed forces.

2—for other personnel, with prior service, total active Federal service deducted from actual age must be equal to or less than 32 years for men and 36 years for women.

3—all male personnel without prior service must not have reached their 32d birthday.

The Marine Corps said that "those desiring active duty may be retained provided they are physically qualified." Those who were members of former Class V(b) are not eligible for assignment to inactive status under the new ruling.

Commanding officers have been authorized and directed to transfer personnel eligible for and desiring transfer to inactive status. They will be transferred to the Reserve District nearest their home address for assignment to Class III.

All requests for transfers must be originated by 1 Feb. 1951, the Marine Corps said, adding "Hereafter, over-age personnel, except former Class V(b), will not be ordered to extended active duty regardless of waiver."

Hospitalization Near Home

The Navy ruled this week that Navy and Marine personnel evacuated to the United States from the Korean war zone will be transferred at government expense to hospitals near their homes if they require more than 30 days hospitalization.

When patients required "definitive or specialized treatment not available at the Naval hospital nearest their home, they will not be considered for transfer."

Airmen Promotion Quotas

The Air Force during December will promote a total of 18,254 airmen to the grades of master sergeant, technical sergeant, staff sergeant and sergeant.

Of this number, 1,069 will be advanced to master sergeant, 2,217 to technical sergeant, 5,874 to staff sergeant and 9,094 to sergeant.

The 18,254 top-grade promotions for December compare with 22,937 authorized for November, 15,800 for October, 13,500 for September and 7,000 for August.

This means that there have been over 75,000 promotions to master sergeant, technical sergeant, staff sergeant and sergeant since initiation of the post-Korean expansion program.

Field Grade Promotions

The Air Force said this week that no definite date has been set as yet for inaugurating temporary promotions to the grades of major, lieutenant colonel and colonel.

It is recalled that several months ago the Air Force sent to field commanders planning criteria concerning promotions to these grades. This data was published in recent issues of THE JOURNAL and it was reported that the Air Force likely would use these criteria substantially when the promotion selection boards were created.

Officials declined to estimate when the promotion boards would be created, but indicated that temporary promotions to field grades will be made in the not too distant future. Probability is that the promotions will be authorized early next year, although this is unofficial.

AF Safety Delegates

Col. Will L. Tubbs, Assistant for Ground Safety Headquarters, United States Air Force, and Maj. Charles V. Carson, Chief of Engineering and Research Division, Office of the Assistant for Ground Safety, recently attended the National Conference on Safety Education for Colleges and Universities in Cincinnati as Air Force representatives.

The Air Force Ground Safety Program maintains close liaison with the safety activities of civilian educational institutions and of industry. This is one phase of the Air Force's safety program which maintains operational efficiency and economy by reducing the loss of equipment and man-hours incurred through accidents.

AFR Units in Combat

Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, Commanding General of the U. S. Far East Air Forces, has announced the presence in the Far East of the 437th Troop Carrier Wing, which arrived in the theater from the U. S. to participate in the Korean airlift. The wing is assigned to FEAF's Combat Cargo Command.

The 437th Troop Carrier Wing is the second reserve unit to be committed to the Korean war. The 452d Light Bomb Wing is flying B-26s in combat in Korea.

The 437th Wing has been training as a reserve unit for the last two years at the O'Hare International Airport at Chicago. Shortly after the outbreak of present hostilities, the Wing was called for a 21-month tour of active duty with the U. S. Air Force. From Chicago the 437th, complete with personnel, equipment and all supporting squadrons, moved to Shaw AFB, S. C., for a period of intensive training in the cargo-carrying field for both ground and flying crews.

The Wing is self-supporting, having its own maintenance supply squadrons and groups, air police, medical personnel and other ground personnel. A short time ago most of these men were in civilian life in the U. S. as bankers, lawyers, physicians, automobile mechanics, clerks and other positions.

Commanding the 437th Troop Carrier Wing is Brig. Gen. John P. Henebry. He is 32 years old, the youngest general in the U. S. Air Force. A graduate of Notre Dame in 1940, General Henebry won his wings in 1941, and during 32 months service in the South Pacific with fighter bomber and light bomber groups during World War II, accumulated 280 combat missions. He holds every Air Force decoration except the Congressional Medal of Honor.

AF Women Personnel

Miss Jacqueline Cochran, prominent aviatrix and businesswoman, is serving as chairman of a board of special consultants to the Chief of Staff of the Air Force which will study all programs pertaining to women in the Air Force. Other members of the board are Mrs. Millicent C. McIntosh, Dean of Barnard College, and Mrs. Gardner Cowles, editor-in-chief of the magazine Flair and associate editor of the magazines Look and Quick.

The three civilian women will survey all Air Force programs involving women, including WAFs, nurses, and women medical specialists.

Miss Cochran headed the Women Air Force Service Pilots (WASPs), auxiliary to the Army Air Forces, during World War II. A licensed pilot since 1932, she holds several national, transcontinental, and international records in aviation.

Air Force Commands

The Air Force has published new regulations pertaining to the Tactical Air Command (AFR 23-10), Continental Air Command (AFR 23-1) and Air Defense Command (AFR 23-9).

Gen. Anderson to Retire

Disclosure was made this week that Maj. Gen. Orvil A. Anderson, USAF, has applied for retirement and will be placed on the retired list effective 31 Dec.

General Anderson has been on temporary duty at Maxwell AFB, Ala., since being relieved as Commandant of the Air War College on 1 Sept. after publication of an interview in an Alabama newspaper.

Then, on 13 Oct., an Air Force spokesman reported that General Anderson was to be given command of the 3750th Technical Training Wing at Sheppard AFB, Tex., succeeding Brig. Gen. Emil C. Keil.

However, General Anderson, according to officials at USAF Headquarters, has remained at Maxwell AFB and will be retired upon his own application on 31 Dec.

General Anderson, 55 years old, enlisted as a flying cadet in August 1917 and has over 33 years service.

In May 1941 he was appointed Air Corps Liaison Officer with the Fourth Corps at Jacksonville, Fla. and in July 1941 was assigned to the Plans Division at Air Force headquarters in Washington, later being appointed chief of the division.

In June 1943 he went to Europe as chairman of the Combined Operational Planning Committee, an organization composed of American and British air officers charged with planning operations for strategic bombing offensive. In 1944 he became deputy commander for operations of the Eighth Air Force in that theater, and on V-E Day was appointed Senior Military Advisor of the U. S. Strategic Bombing Survey, which was charged by the President with studying economic and military value of bombing on Germany, Japan, and all occupied territories.

In June 1946 General Anderson became commandant of the Air War College.

General Anderson has been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal with one Oak Leaf Cluster, Legion of Merit, Silver Star, Distinguished Flying Cross with one Oak Leaf Cluster, Air Medal, and World War II Victory Medal. His foreign decorations include the French Legion of Honor and Croix de Guerre with Palm and the British Companion of the Bath.

For outstanding aerial achievement he was awarded the Mackay Trophy, Harmon International Award and the Federation Aeronautique International Prix Henry De Lavaux. He also has received seven official commendations in connection with flying duty and is rated a Command Pilot, Senior Balloon Pilot, Combat Observer, Balloon Observer, and Aircraft Observer.

AF Terminology

At the Air Force indoctrination center, Lackland AFB, Tex., concern has been expressed that proper terminology is not being used. The following examples are cited in the Lackland Talespinner, base publication:

The Air Force has DINING HALLS, not mess halls.

They are AIR POLICE, or APs, not MPs.

We have BASE exchanges, not post exchanges.

We have mess ATTENDANTS, not kitchen police.

We have GRADUATES, not casuals, on this base.

We have breakfast, lunch, dinners; not breakfast, dinner, supper.

In the Air Force, we have MEN, not boys.

Transferred From PMG

Lt. Col. Kenneth L. Leiby, MPC, was transferred from the Staff and Faculty, The Provost Marshal General's School, Camp Gordon, Ga., to the 95th Military Government Group at Camp Gordon, effective 1 Dec.

This program of necessity is vitally concerned with the development of new models of aircraft. From the mock-up board, on through engineering and service testing and into operational use, Flight Safety Research closely monitors the progress of each new model. On one recently developed aircraft a series of mechanical faults resulted in the establishment of a project to determine and to eliminate the source of the trouble. At the same time maintenance procedures were examined closely and organizations equipped with and scheduled to receive this aircraft were contacted and the difficulty was explained.

In interviewing pilots who flew this plane, it developed that many of them distrusted its escape features. Realizing that confidence is necessary if a plane is to be operated at peak efficiency, action was initiated to insure that pilots were thoroughly indoctrinated in the use and composition of the escape system.

Meanwhile, Flight Safety's investigators and engineers in cooperation with factory and Air Materiel Command representatives, were solving the mechanical difficulties which had developed. The combined know-how of the factory's designers and engineers, Air Force Procurement agents, and Flight Safety's technical and educational experts had nipped in the bud what might have developed into a tragic and expensive rash of accidents.

It is the intention of Flight Safety to forestall other similar situations before they develop. As new equipment comes off the drawing boards, it will be examined closely by engineers, pilots, survival experts and medical personnel to assure that its crew will have every opportunity to be spared the possibility of an accident—or if an accident does occur—that they have every chance to survive the emergency.

Another major activity of the Directorate of Flight Safety Research is the exhaustive investigation of accidents selected for their particular interest. Here again, the whole Flight Safety system goes into gear and no stone is left unturned until a satisfactory answer is obtained. Statisticians and analysts supply past history data which may help to develop clues. Engineers and pilots experienced in accident investigation are dispatched to the scene for an on-the-spot investigation. Medical personnel probe the injury or fatality inducing factors. Psychological experts study the human considerations involved. Educational personnel translate the findings to the Air Force so that similar accidents may be averted. The coverage is complete. A sound solution to the cause must be found.

That the new analytical system of accident prevention is receiving widespread acceptance is attested by the fact that civil air lines and manufacturers have offered unstinting cooperation with the Air Force's activities. They realize that accident prevention means the survival of aviation—military and civilian.

Recently, the Air Force negotiated agreements with a number of major aircraft manufacturers to have representatives of their engineering staffs serve with the Directorate of Flight Safety Research on a temporary basis. This plan is designed to work for the benefit of both the Air Force and the people who produce Air Force equipment. Flight Safety learns the problems of the manufacturers and the manufacturers become more familiar with Air Force requirements. This free exchange of essential information is expected to erase many future design and procurement problems, and decrease the economic strain on the nation's resources.

The greatest single problem in flight safety today is to reduce pilot error, and an effective program is a must for the Air Force. All available means are utilized. Through standardization and the provision of high safety factors in equipment design and the establishment of safe operational procedures the opportunity for error is reduced. Through the presentation of special awards to deserving organizations for meritorious flight safety records, safety incentives are stimulated. The cost and serious consequences of accidents are considered for the same reason. Also all available training methods are used to indoctrinate pilots in proper flight techniques.

Flight safety in military aviation is concerned with saving lives, equipment and dollars, all of which are urgently needed to achieve maximum Air Force combat efficiency. It is a guarantee to the American people that every defense dollar will provide a dollar's worth of defense. Despite the progress that has been made, much to be achieved still lies ahead. Improved safety in flight through intensive research and exhaustive studies holds the key to the future of aviation.

Billy was four and a half and as full of questions as a quiz program.

But the telephone man didn't mind. He had a little boy of his own and he knew how it was. Patiently he kept explaining every step as he installed the new telephone in Billy's home.

Finally the job was done and he was about to make the usual call to the Central Office to be sure everything was in perfect working order.

But it wasn't the usual call this time. For it happened to be just a little while before Christmas and you know how excited a little boy of four and a half can get about then. And the installer and his co-workers at the Central Office had something specially arranged for just such a situation.

"Would you like to talk to Santa Claus?" he asked.
"Right now — over this telephone?"

THIS IS A TRUE STORY of how a telephone installer spread gladness among little boys and girls wherever he found them in the homes he visited during the pre-Christmas period. . . . Nobody asked him and his Santa Claus conspirators in the Central Office to do it. It was their own idea—and just another example of the friendly spirit of telephone people. . . . SATURDAY, 2 DECEMBER 1950

"Only by universal military training can full vigor and life be instilled into the Reserve system." —REPORT OF GENERAL GEORGE C. MARSHALL, 30 JUNE 1945.

OUR PRIORITY LIST

1. Early construction of adequate Government quarters for commissioned and enlisted personnel at all permanent stations, supplemented by satisfactory legislation to encourage private building of dwelling units near Service installations.
2. Increased retirement pay for wounded and disabled personnel.
3. Construction and extension of medical and dental care for families of Service personnel; provision for education at Government expense of children of Service personnel on duty at stations where suitable free schools are not available; and survival benefits for dependents.
4. Restoration of military exemptions from Federal income tax, broadened to exclude all retired pay from taxation.
5. Early attainment and continued maintenance of a fully-manned 70-group Air Force.
6. Prompt construction of a radar fleet and air warning net to cover all avenues of hostile air approach.
7. Rapid expansion of our submarine fleet and accelerated development of anti-submarine vessels and equipment, with continued specialization and construction of new Naval types.
8. Organization and training of a balanced Mobile Ground Force, including air-borne and amphibious troops, of sufficient strength and ready, with complete and modern equipment, for immediate action in an emergency.
9. Development and improvement of the organization and training of the National Guard, Organized Reserves, and other components of the Armed Forces, with appropriate training facilities, and restoration of inactive training pay for all elements.
10. Continued scientific research and development in all new and unconventional devices and methods of warfare backed by industry and labor kept constantly ready and trained through production and educational orders.
11. Close supervision and constant study of Service promotion and elimination policies and procedures, to insure the prevention or prompt correction of injustices and inequities.

The War in Korea. The United Nations must act promptly to relieve General Douglas MacArthur and the UN forces from the impossible military position in which they have been placed. Vast hordes of Chinese Red troops mobilize safely behind the Manchurian border and then cross and attack the smaller UN forces, inflicting enormous casualties and driving them from their hard-won positions. Yet he can not strike back at their bases. Red antiaircraft artillery just inside Manchuria fire on our planes over north Korea, but our forces are forbidden to silence them. Red planes attack our bombers over Korea and flee back to their homeland, well knowing that the restrictions placed on General MacArthur deny UN planes the right to pursue them. No military leader ever had his hands tied so effectively by his superiors. The United Nations must free him.

An Enduring System of National Defense. Now is the time for Congress and the Nation to take to heart the advice of Secretary Marshall and lay plans "to set up an enduring system of National Defense, a system that will not collapse at every change of wind and temperature, a system that will keep us prepared for any emergency, yet will not sap the economic strength which is of maximum importance to the democratic people of the entire world." Secretary Marshall did not enumerate the details of such a system, but it is plain that it would have to be based on inviolable minimum standards for the Regular active Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps, backed up by an ample reserve of trained manpower and an industrial system prepared to turn out modern weapons and equipment. Selective service may meet today's needs, but only a permanent system of Universal Military Training supplemented by a sound ROTC program can fill out the National Guard and Reserves with fully trained personnel and provide a reservoir to meet emergencies. Our factories can expand and convert to equip the forces we are now building, but only a long range plan for industrial preparedness, with plants and machinery on a stand-by basis, will give the instant readiness we must have for an "enduring" National Defense. In carrying out the program for the immediate future Congress must keep the wise warning of Secretary Marshall constantly in mind to the end that something of permanent value may remain when the inevitable period of contraction comes.

Dependent Care. The statement of Chairman Charles P. Cooper of the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee, as printed in last week's ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL, offers little encouragement to those who seek a rejuvenation of the traditional policy of the Services providing medical and dental care for the families of their personnel. Despite Secretary of the Army Pace's report that uncertainty with respect to dependent care is damaging morale, Mr. Cooper declares that his committee has observed no evidence of any reduction in dependent care. Mr. Cooper points to studies being made of an "insurance program" to supplement the existing dependent care. It appears that the idea is to confine dependent care to such personnel as occupy government quarters and to throw others upon local resources by means of an insurance program. (It is not clear who would pay the insurance premiums.) Thus, families forced to live off their posts because of the shortage of housing or because the head of the family is overseas, would be doubly penalized by being denied access to the Service hospitals. We recall that when Dr. Richard L. Meiling, OSD Medical Director and former member of the Cooper Committee, brought up the subject of such insurance before the House Committee on Armed Services he was accused of trying to do away with dependent care. He denied the charge, but Representative Shafer commented that there was certainly every indication that such was the case. It must also be recalled that Dr. Meiling and a number of the members of the Cooper committee were also members of "task forces" under the former Hoover Commission. These committees not only sought to deprive the military services of their general hospitals, but also suggested that dependents not be treated in Service hospitals but be farmed out to civilian facilities or covered by insurance. The ill-timed closing of large service hospitals (later forced to be reopened) would appear to be in line with the Hoover recommendations, which Congress thus far has failed to approve. Congress should clarify the family care situation by approving Representative Rivers' bill to give full statutory authority for dependent care in Service hospitals.

Extra Hazard Pay

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Ten per cent of the armed services suffered approximately ninety per cent casualties in World War II. If the War had lasted longer or the enemy had been tougher, every front-line soldier could have been assured of becoming a casualty.

The combat soldier was hard to get in World War II. Physical hardship as well as danger was his lot. He lived like a hunted animal. His rewards were the same as those of his rear-echelon helper.

With the above facts as common knowledge the hard-fighting American combat soldier will be a rare item indeed, in World War III. A complete review of the armed services personnel policies is in order. As a starter consideration of the following proposals regarding extra-hazard pay is offered:

1. That it be the same for all ranks and all services. (A man can give no more than his life be a private in the Marines or a General in the Air Force.)

2. That the amount be fixed for all as $200.00 per month plus $10,000.00 additional life insurance. (The soldier's wife deserves consideration.)

3. That the recipients be determined by the President. (Congressional action is too slow and uncertain.)

4. That the basis for determination of recipients be per cent casualties per month of hazard for the class of personnel considered.

5. That extra-hazard pay be effective during the months that the hazard occurs.

6. That in the future additional awards be paid to those who are decorated for valor. (The soldier should know that his Country appreciates his services not just a little bit but a whole lot.)

a. That the rates for pay for a decoration be proportional to the decoration received, varying from $10.00 per month for the Bronze Star to $200.00 per month for the Congressional Medal.

b. That these awards be payable for life.

c. That only personnel who have qualified for extra-hazard pay be permitted to sit on a decorations and awards board.

We must give our men their just rewards before we have any right to demand their loyal service.

Wants New Uniform

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In regards to a new Army uniform of gray about which an article appeared in your 18 Nov. issue I have this to offer:

1. In my opinion the present olive drab (shade 33) Army uniform is by far the most unattractive uniform in the Services.

2. A new, dressy, gray uniform will improve the morale of the enlisted man by a large measure.

3. The majority of the enlisted men today are actually ashamed of the Army olive drab uniform—for its appearance only, of course. This is an observation of mine.

4. I strongly recommend that the Army adopt a handsome gray uniform as soon as possible. As a starter use the gray uniform for dress only—then, gradually use it for all occasions. Make the gray uniform, after adoption, optional for a period of two years with the exception of troop formations. Peter H. Comnas, Major, Arty.

One Year Ago

Rear Adm. Joseph F. Jolley, Jr., Navy Civil Engineer Corps, was sworn in this week as new Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks. He succeeded Rear Adm. John J. Manning, CEC, USN, whose term of office expired on 1 Dec.

There is no doubt that Mussolini's first offensive against Greece has failed. Rome reports that he is now preparing a large scale offensive against the Greeks using a new technique based on Italian experiments in the Ethiopian and Spanish wars.

25 Years Ago

Entirely apart from the problems that have been raised by the new and enlarged uses of military aviation, the question has been often before considered of uniting the Army and Navy under a Secretary of National Defense. The argument in favor of such a course has been and is that there is now overlapping of the Army and Navy. The argument against such a course is the added complexity in organization which would inevitably result.

50 Years Ago

Early in the first session of the present Congress, a bill for the retirement of Army officers who served during the Civil War with the next higher grade was introduced and its passage recommended by the War Department. It is stated upon good authority that there has been no interest displayed by Army officers generally in the passage of this measure. It is too often the case that in any measures pending before Congress relating to the Army, the ordinary Army officer fails to take an active interest when he is not personally benefited by them.

85 Years Ago

Commissary and Quartermaster stores are still disposed of in large quantities. On the 5th, 1,500 barrels of whiskey are to be sold at auction, and on the day following, a large quantity of lumber, hardware, machinery, railroad supplies, leather at auction in Alexandria. At the corral at this latter point, one day last week, about 500 head of cattle were sold. Beesves brought from three to four cents per pound, and fat cows and working oxen higher prices.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—As hordes of Red Chinese soldiers swept south from Manchuria to attack United Nations forces in Korea the United States charged the Chinese Communists with "open and notorious aggression." The charge was made in the Security Council of the United Nations this week by Ambassador Warren Austin, who said he was making this grave accusation at the direction of the American government.

As Mr. Austin spoke he looked directly at General Wu Hsiu-chuan, chief representative of Red China, who was at the meeting to protest against alleged aggression of the United States in sending the Seventh Fleet to neutralize Formosa. Mr. Austin asked the Chinese delegation to answer a score of questions bearing on the Red invasion of Korea. He wanted to know whether the Peiping government still maintained that the hundreds of thousands of Chinese soldiers in Korea were volunteers, how and when they were organized, when the aggression was planned, and what its purpose was. He asked if Red China would abide by the decision of the United Nations in the matter.

Ambassador Austin's address was in support of a resolution demanding the withdrawal of Chinese troops from Korea. The resolution was introduced more than two weeks ago by six members of the Security Council, but action on it was delayed by the dilatory tactics of the Russian delegation, which had announced in advance that if the resolution were passed it would be vetoed by Soviet Russia.

General Wu, the Red Chinese representative, who spoke for two hours following Mr. Austin, shrugged off all reference to Chinese aggression in Korea, except to reiterate that the Chinese formations in Korea had volunteered for this service. In a long diatribe he charged that the United States was acting aggressively against China in Formosa, Korea, Indo-China, the Philippines and elsewhere in the Far East for the purpose of starting a third world war. He demanded that nationalist China be expelled from the United Nations, and that America be branded as an aggressor. His arguments were largely those previously used repeatedly and tediously by Russia, and with which the diplomats at Lake Success are all too familiar.

While non-Communist delegates to the United Nations are desperately trying to avoid an open war with China, which would almost certainly set off World War III, there is no attempt to minimize the seriousness of the situation. Any hope of an amicable adjustment of differences apparently vanished with the vehemence of the denunciations of the United States by the Red Chinese representative. Western European countries are specially anxious to avoid a conflict which might very probably start the Russian legions marching westward against the ill-prepared democracies.

The situation in Europe is made doubly serious by the reluctance of the threatened countries to make clearcut provision for the common defense. This attitude was emphasized by the heavy vote registered against German rearmament in recent local parliamentary elections in three west German states in the American zone. However, President Truman announced this week that he is ready to name a Supreme Commander for the combined forces for the defense of Europe. It is generally understood it will be General Eisenhower. The agreement may come 5 Dec. at the meeting of the North Atlantic military chiefs in London.

Last week in the states of Wurtemburg-Baden and Hesse a particularly heavy Socialist vote was cast on the issue of rearmament which the Socialists strongly opposed. This week even more sensational Socialist gains were made in the ordinarily strongly conservative state of Bavaria. Here for the first time in history the Socialists secured a plurality of the vote, though a conservative coalition is expected to control the local parliament.

In Bavaria four years ago Chancellor Adenauer's Christian Democrats polled 52 per cent of the total vote, but this year they secured only 27 per cent. This sweeping reverse has led to demands that the Adenauer government of West Germany resign and call a new election on the issue of rearmament so strongly opposed by the Socialists. One gratifying result of the local elections was the almost complete elimination of the Communists as a political factor.

Despite the apparent strong German sentiment against participation in European defense, the European Consultative Assembly, with German representation, voted to recommend a unified European army. In this international army German units would be incorporated. French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, a strong protagonist of a central military force, said France would contribute unconditionally to such a force. This proposed army would function under a European war ministry, and would be somewhat different from that envisaged by the United States as an Atlantic Security Treaty force.

Publication of a memorandum sent by the United States to Far Eastern Commission nations reveals a suggested outline of points to be included in a proposed Japanese peace treaty. Under the tentative American proposal Japanese membership in the United Nations is contemplated. Japan would recognize the independence of Korea, agree to American trusteeship of the Ryukyu and Bonin Islands, and accept the future decision of the United States, Russia, Great Britain, France and China as to the status of Formosa, Pescadores, South Sakhalin and the Kuriles.

The proposal provides that in the event of no decision within a year the General Assembly of the United Nations would decide. This provision was undoubtedly included in order to prevent Russia from delaying any decision for an indefinite period, as had happened in the case of the Austrian peace treaty, and the determination of the status of Trieste. It also provides that United States and perhaps other forces would have co-operative responsibility with Japanese facilities for the security of Japan.

In replying to the memorandum Russia raised the question as to whether it was proposed to grant the United States military bases in Japan. It asked also what basis there was for placing the Ryukyu and Bonin Islands under American trusteeship. The Russians declared that Southern Sakhalin and the Kuriles had been awarded to Russia under the Yalta agreement, and that all interested powers had decided at Cairo and Potsdam that Formosa belonged to China. The Russians also inquired what the United States intends to do about consulting Communist China with reference to the proposed Japanese treaty.

Army JAGC—The organization and functions of the Judge Advocate General's Corps of the Army are described in a new set of regulations, AR 10-225, 16 Nov., which supersede similarly numbered regulations, published 8 May 1950.

Beware of "Lessons," Says Air General—The best lesson learned to date from the air war in Korea is "to be wary of 'learning lessons'" in the opinion of Maj. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, Commanding General of the U. S. Air Force's Far East Bomber Command. "Insofar as strategic bombing is concerned we in the field are making no recommendations based on this campaign for changes in procurement (of aircraft), training, or general planning for any future, real strategic air war," General O'Donnell states in an article in the current issue of the house organ of the Boeing Airplane Company.

"From the standpoint of strategic bombardment operations we have learned very little new (from the Korean conflict) in tactics or techniques," General O'Donnell writes. He points out, however, that "we have improved and expanded to some extent the recognized and accepted methods developed during the last war."

General O'Donnell, whose normal command is the Fifteenth Air Force with headquarters at March Air Force Base, Calif., also praises the soundness of the Strategic Air Command's training program. The "SAC Mobility Plan"—providing for movement of any unit of this USAF Command to any spot in the world on but a few hours' notice—was called into action soon after the Korean war began, he explains. "The B-29 bomb groups had loaded their fly-away kits including enough spare parts, tools and other equipment to enable them to fly more than 8,000 miles, set up complete operations and get into action immediately." The success of this Strategic Air Command plan "clearly indicates the soundness and practicability of our policy of concentrating fully equipped strategic wings in the United States where training facilities are better," General O'Donnell states.

Consider Combat Identification—The Army has under consideration proposals for authorization of a badge for ground force elements, other than infantry, who are in direct action against an enemy force. This has been made known as a result of queries put to officials after receipt by THE JOURNAL of numerous letters from combat artillermen and tankers who maintain that some badge should be authorized for them, as is done for combat infantrymen.

The matter is understood to be under top-level study at the Pentagon and there is a good possibility such a badge will be authorized, since commanders of combat units have reported that such action would be important to morale. In this regard, it is recalled that creation of the combat infantryman's badge gained instantaneous approval from men in infantry units, who rightfully consider the badge a distinguished award to be worn with great pride.

On the other hand, as reflected in letters received in the past few years and especially since fighting began in Korea, other ground force troops in direct action with the enemy feel that their service should not be slighted.

Korean Ribbon—Defense officials said this week that the Services are in the process of drafting implementing regulations for issuance of the Korean campaign ribbon, recently authorized by Presidential Executive Order. No date was forecast for beginning distribution of the ribbon.

Japan Logistical Command—Col. Jacob H. Bloss has been named chief of the inspection division of the Inspector General's Section, Japan Logistical Command, with headquarters in Yokohama. The Japan Logistical Command, whose mission includes the logistical support of the troops in Korea and the occupation forces in Japan (Army, Air Force, and Navy), is commanded by Maj. Gen. Walter L. Weible.

Prior to his present assignment, Colonel Bloss performed similar duties with Headquarters, Eighth Army. He arrived in the Far East Command last February after duty at Headquarters, Continental Air Command, Mitchel AFB, N. Y.

Air Force Dental Service—The following Air Force Dental Corps officers have been recommended for assignment to recently activated Air Force bases as listed: Maj. William R. Hutchinson, Truax AFB, Wisc., formerly at Randolph AFB, Tex.; Maj. Daniel W. Tucker, Godman AFB, Ky., formerly at Carswell AFB, Tex.; and Maj. Jules D. Kartman, Presque Isle, Me., formerly at Biggs AFB, Tex. These officers will be in charge of the dental service at their new stations and will report early in January, 1951.

New Army Insignia—Although the Army Organization Act of 1950 became effective late in June and thereby created the new Artillery and Armor branches, no new insignia have yet been designated. Army officials, in answer to a query from THE JOURNAL, said this week that "the matter is still under study." The Artillery branch combines the former Field Artillery and Coast Artillery, while the Armor branch replaces the Cavalry.

Sentence is Commuted—The President has commuted the death sentence of 1st Lt. Leon A. Gilbert to 20 years in prison and dismissal from the Army. A court-martial in Korea had convicted the officer of having "misbehaved himself before the enemy by refusing to advance with his command."

An Army official reported that since 1930, 147 death sentences have been carried out—146 for murder or rape and one for cowardly desertion in the face of the enemy.

Signal Corps—The Bronze Star Medal with "V" (for valor) device has been awarded two more Signal Corps Officers in Korea. Capt. Morgan Z. Evans, working in the capacity of Brigade Signal Officer, distinguished himself on 17 Sept. at Inchon, Korea, where he showed a high technical skill in overcoming many problems. Within a few minutes after landing in Inchon, Captain Evans' resourcefulness provided radio contact and facilitated the establishing of communications with subordinate units of the command post. First Lieutenant (then Second Lieutenant) Allen J. McCormack won his award as a battalion communications officer of the 24th Infantry from 31 August to 2 Sept.

Bureau of Medicine and Surgery—Comdr. John D. Walters, MC, USN, Chief, Dermatology Service, National Naval Medical Center, Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md., has recently been certified by the American Board of Dermatology and Syphilology and Comdr. Everett J. Olenick, MC, USN, was certified by the American Board of Ophthalmology. Commander Olenick is presently assigned to the Naval Hospital, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Army Chaplains—Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Joel M. Wareing, Personnel Division, Office, Chief of Chaplains, represented the Chief of Chaplains at the US Air Force Air Chaplains Conference at Mitchel Air Force Base, Long Island, New York, 20-21 Nov. He spoke on "The Army Chaplain Program."

Warrant Officer Legislation

Department of Defense to remedy the warrant officer situation is too long in reaching Congress, Representative Sutton will sponsor a bill himself.

However, every indication is that a Department bill will be sent to the Bureau of the Budget in time for it to reach Congress by February.

Paradoxically, most of the work looking toward an improvement of the warrant officers' situation has been carried on by the smallest group affected—the Chief Warrant and Warrant Officers Association of the U. S. Coast Guard. Knowing their concern in the matter, Representative Sutton this week informed them of the progress being made in a letter to Mr. George R. Pearce, chairman of their Legislative Committee. Representative Sutton wrote:

"This will confirm the matters and things discussed and determined at the conference in my office today when I met with you and the President of your organization, Mr. Schonwald, and your counsel, Messrs. McDaniel and Ring, with respect to further steps to be taken in seeking correction of the inequities for warrant officers under the present provisions of the Career Compensation Act of 1949."

"You will recall that we reviewed the position originally taken by my office and by your organization in the fight to prevent enactment of legislation which gave unlimited discretion to the Secretaries of the Departments concerned in distributing warrant officers into pay grades as such Secretaries might see fit. We felt then, and we find no reason to change our opinion today, that such distribution of warrant officers, when all other ranks and ratings were put into specific pay grades by the very letter of the law, was unfair and inequitable and bound to produce undesirable results. And we later discovered that as soon as a financial pinch took place in the Department of Defense, the predecessor in office to the present Secretary of Defense was quick to put into effect percentage restrictions on the higher pay grades, which effectuated savings at the expense of warrant officers who might otherwise have been advanced into such higher pay grades as provided by Congress.

"I now confirm what I told you at the conference. I have ascertained that a subcommittee of the Personnel Policy Board of the Department of Defense has been hard at work for months upon the problem in which we are so deeply interested and has proposed legislation which will exert a corrective influence to a degree which I am sure will be satisfactory to all concerned. Since the work of the sub-committee is contained in a report which is awaiting approval by higher authorities in the Executive Branch of the Government, the subject matter thereof should not be made public at this time.

"I further confirm the fact that I have been given assurances that, as a result of the splendid work of this sub-committee, there is every likelihood that there will be presented by the executive departments concerned a proposal for amendment of the Career Compensation Act of 1949 which will correct the inequities in that law for the warrant officers and provide distribution of those officers into pay grades by law in a manner which is at once fair and equitable and at the same time smooth and workable for the departments concerned. The assurances given me are that such a proposal will be presented on or before February 1, 1951. I feel that under such a state of affairs further action until that time should be held in abeyance.

"I am sending a copy of this letter to Capt. H. C. Bruton, USN, legislative liaison officer for the Department of Defense, who covenanted to me the assurances above referred to.

"I want to congratulate you and Mr. Schonwald and your counsel, Messrs. McDaniel and Ring, in arriving at the final stages in the battle to remove the inequities against warrant officers in the Career Compensation Act. I feel that the campaign you have waged, now has every chance of being successful, and that with the coming of the New Year, we will find an amendment proposed and enacted which will be equitable to the Warrant Officers and effect their distribution into pay grades as a matter of law in a proper manner, rather than leaving this to the discretion of the Secretaries concerned."

That the number of W-3 and W-4 appointments will be increased is implicit in the Personnel Policy Board statement, made available this week, which declares that although it is not intended to guarantee automatic advancement to W-4 prior to retirement, "those officers who can meet the qualifications established by the respective Services should be afforded the opportunity to advance through the various pay grades to pay grade W-4 prior to being placed on the retired list by reason of length of service or by attaining the statutory retirement age."

The Personnel Policy Board statement contained 12 "general policies," which it is believed can be implemented by the Services without need for legislation."

However, it was learned that the Board's original memorandum, addressed to the Service Secretaries, actually contained nine additional paragraphs relating to the impending legislation.

Obviously, there is the probability that the Services and the Personnel Policy Board will modify the present legislative proposals to some degree before a final bill is drafted. Between now and the submittal of the legislation to the Bureau of the Budget and then to Congress, the Services and the Personnel Policy Board likely will be engaged in frequent conferences on the warrant officer situation, making necessary last-minute revisions. This factor probably accounts for the reluctance to make available the complete text of the warrant officer statement, including the nine paragraphs relating to legislation.

Following is the text of the Board's memorandum to the Service Secretaries in the form in which it was officially released this week:

"SUBJECT: Implementation of the Armed Services Warrant Officer Program, (M-10-50).

"The Personnel Policy Board has approved the following general policies concerning the implementation of the Armed Services warrant officer program:

"1. That the following general policies be adopted as guides in the field of procurement of warrant officers by the Armed Services.

"a. Procurement shall be limited to citizens of the United States.

War in Korea

the councils of the United Nations and chancelleries of the world.

General MacArthur's estimate of 200,000 Red Chinese fighting in Korea is borne out by battlefield identifications and interrogations of prisoners. Indeed, there are indications that the total number of Chinese now facing our troops in Korea may be substantially greater than 200,000, since reinforcements are pouring across the international boundary from Manchuria every night.

Six Chinese armies have now been identified in Korea. A Chinese army is somewhat smaller than the normal American corps, and usually has an average strength of about 30,000. One of the armies so identified is known to have been in east central China, several hundred miles from Korea, as recently as ten days ago.

There are indications that more than half of the Red Chinese force entered Korea within the past two weeks. One Chinese soldier captured by our troops said his unit had been in Korea only three days.

Losses among the attacking Reds are officially described as "unbelievably heavy." The Communists swarmed over Allied positions in vast numbers and kept coming regardless of losses. Thousands of the assault troops were slain, but enough survived to capture the positions they stormed, and Red reinforcements exploited every gain, and poured through every breach in the Allied line. Some horse cavalry was used by the Reds in their night attacks, but nowhere in formations larger than a squadron.

Round-the-clock air attacks in close support of ground troops inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy. However, most of the Red movements on the roads are at night when it is most difficult to make effective air strikes. The Reds are masters of camouflage and while en route remain in well-disguised hideouts in the daytime.

Carrier based United States naval aircraft struck hard at Red lines of communications during the week in a narrow zone in northern Korea near the border. Pilots encountered intense anti-aircraft fire from the Manchurian side of the Yalu River, but not much from the Korean side. They reported heavy rail and road traffic toward the battle area.

Fighter and bomber planes of the United States Fifth Air Force intensified tactical air support of ground troops. In heavy, co-ordinated air assaults they pounded the Communists in 90 different areas during the week, with the major northwest Korea. Hundreds of enemy troops are believed to have been killed by the air attacks. Buildings, vehicles, supply dumps, and artillery positions were destroyed.

B-26 light bombers, operating day and night, destroyed or damaged three trains in northern Korea. A flight of F-80 jets scored direct hits on two bridges over the Yalu at Manpojin, knocking out at least one span.

B-29 Superfortresses raided supply areas, communications centers, and rail lines in northwest Korea, with excellent results. Rail lines were cut at six different points and direct hits were made on a railroad bridge at Kuchang-dong.

Only a few enemy aircraft were sighted during the week. Those seen were near the northern border of Korea and made no attempt to attack our planes nor to provide tactical support for Red ground forces.

Ask Arms Increases

troops from Manchuria to launch a strong and well-organized attack against the United Nations forces in North Korea. This has been done despite prolonged and earnest efforts to bring home to the Communist leaders of China the plain fact that neither the United Nations nor the United States has any aggressive intentions toward China. Because of the historic friendship between the people of the United States and China, it is particularly shocking to us to think that Chinese are being forced into battle against our troops in the United Nations command.

The Chinese attack was made in great force and it still continues. It has resulted in the forced withdrawal of large parts of the United Nations command. The battlefield situation is uncertain at this time. We may suffer reverses as we have suffered them before. But the forces of the United Nations have no intention of abandoning their mission in Korea.

The forces of the United Nations are in Korea to put down an aggression that threatens not only the whole fabric of the United Nations, but all human hopes of peace and justice. If the United Nations yields to the forces of aggression, no nation will be safe or secure. If aggression is successful in Korea, we can expect it to spread through Asia and Europe to this hemisphere. We are fighting in Korea for our own national security and survival.

We have committed ourselves to the cause of a just and peaceful world order through the United Nations. We stand by that commitment.

We shall meet the new situation in three ways. We shall continue to work in the United Nations for concerted action to halt this aggression in Korea. We shall intensify our efforts to help other free nations strengthen their defenses in order to meet the threat of aggression elsewhere. We shall rapidly increase our own military strength.

In the United Nations, the first step is action by the Security Council to halt this aggression. Ambassador Warren Austin is pressing for such action. We shall exert every effort to help bring the full influence of the United Nations to bear on the situation in Korea.

Some had hoped that the normal peaceful process of discussion and negotiation, which is provided through the United Nations, could be successfully entered into with the present Chinese Communist delegation at Lake Success. There is, however, no indication that the representatives of Communist China are willing to engage in this process. Instead of discussing the real issues, they have been making violent and wholly false statements of the type which have often been used by the Soviet representatives in an effort to prevent the Security Council from acting.

We hope that the Chinese people will not continue to be forced or deceived into serving the ends of Russian colonial policy in Asia. I am certain that, if the Chinese people now under the control of the Communists were free to speak for themselves, they would denounce this aggression against the United Nations.

Because this new act of aggression in Korea is only a part of a world-wide pattern of danger to all the free nations of the world, it is more necessary than ever before for us to increase at a very rapid effort centered along the battle line in rate the combined military strength of the free nations. It is more necessary than ever that integrated forces in Europe under a supreme command be established at once.

With respect to our own defense, I shall submit a supplemental request for appropriations needed immediately to increase the size and effectiveness of our armed forces. The request will include a substantial amount for the Atomic Energy Commission in addition to large amounts for the Army, the Navy and the Air Force.

I expect to confer tomorrow with congressional leaders and ask them to give urgent consideration to these appropriations.

This is a time for all our citizens to lay aside differences and unite in firmness and mutual determination to do what is best for our country and the cause of freedom throughout the world. This country is the keystone of the hopes of mankind for peace and justice. We must show that we are guided by a common purpose and a common faith.

New Atomic Plants

The Atomic Energy Commission has announced that its new production plants to be designed, built and operated by the du Pont company, will be located in Aiken and Barnwell counties, South Carolina, near the Savannah River. About 250,000 acres will be acquired for the site. The new site will be known as the Savannah River Plant.

As was voted by the President last July in asking the Congress to appropriate $260,000,000 to start construction, these additional plants, like the existing facilities, will provide materials which can be used either for weapons or for fuels potentially useful for power purposes. Operations at the Savannah River plants will not involve the manufacture of atomic weapons.

Much of the information used as a basis for studies of sites was developed and supplied by the Army's Corps of Engineers.

The following factors, it was announced were of major importance in determining the site:

1. Military considerations including vulnerability to attack;

2. Operating requirements of the facilities themselves the details of which cannot be disclosed for reasons of national security;

3. Accessibility to population centers to avoid establishing a new government community such as those at Oak Ridge, Tenn.; Los Alamos, N. Mex.; and Richland, Wash.

4. Public health and safety considerations involving the location and adequacy of the site.

Acquisition of the land will be undertaken by the Corps of Engineers.

Hypersonic Wind Tunnel

Speeds of more than ten times the velocity of sound are being obtained in the recently completed hypersonic wind tunnel on the campus at the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Calif. Powered, principally by General Electric motors, the tunnel was designed and built for the Institute and the Army Ordnance Department, to provide vitally needed information for use in the design of future missiles at speeds well above those of present day rockets and missiles.

The new tunnel, called "hypersonic" because of the terrific air speeds attained, has been operated at higher than Mach 10. (A Mach number of one represents a speed equal to the speed of sound which is approximately 760 mph at sea level.) The Ordnance-Cal Tech tunnel operates continuously during experiments and air velocities of Mach 10 can be obtained for any length of time desired.

All-Welded Aluminum Vessel

The USS PT-811, the Navy's first all-welded aluminum vessel, was launched during ceremonies 30 Nov. at Trumpy's Yacht Yard, Annapolis, Md. The sponsor of the vessel was Mrs. James B. Drake of St. James School, Md., daughter of Vice Adm. and Mrs. Harry W. Hill, USN, Superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy and Commandant of the Severn River Naval Command.

The PT-811 is a forerunner of a new class of patrol torpedo boats which will replace the "splinter fleet" PT's of World War II. PT boats were used extensively for inshore coastal work during World War II, and many will remember the havoc they created in the Southwest Pacific.

The PT-811 was built at a yard which has never done metal shipbuilding before, the John Trumpy & Sons, Inc., of Annapolis, renowned in boating circles for custom built wooden yachts. This is significant because the techniques developed for metal construction could be used by other wood boat building yards in an emergency.

Three aluminum sister vessels have been built at shipyards in Philadelphia, New London, Conn., and Bath, Maine, but the hulls were not of the all-welded type. The new metal boats are 95 feet in length with a 25-foot beam, larger than the wartime "mosquito" boats and are expected to be smoother riding. Each will be propelled by a newly developed gasoline engine. Aluminum was used in construction because of its light weight and well-known resistance to corrosion.

The PT-811 was built under the supervision of Capt. W. D. Leggett, Jr., USN, Supervisor of Shipbuilding in the Annapolis area, who is the Director of the U. S. Naval Engineering Experiment Station, and Comdr. J. R. Wallingford, USN, Assistant Supervisor of Shipbuilding and Officer for the Experiment Station's Metallurgical, Welding and Electrical Labs.

Metallurgical Laboratory personnel investigated the corrosion-resistant qualities of various types of aluminum alloys considered for the construction. Personnel of the Welding and Electrical Laboratory were instrumental in developing the welding procedure applied in the construction and in evaluating causes of cracks in some bulkheads. They used the oil powder method of flaw detection developed by the Laboratory for detecting cracks, and X-ray tested the main welded joints.

Approve Northrop School

The U. S. Navy and U. S. Air Force have approved the Northrop Aeronautical Institute's Aeronautical Engineering course as a prerequisite to cadet pilot training, according to announcement by James L. McKinley, the institute's managing director.

To be eligible for enlistment as an aviation cadet, a man must have completed at least two full academic years of higher education toward a degree. Successful completion of the full two-year course in Aeronautical Engineering at NAI now satisfies this requirement, it was stated.

Merchant Fleet Report

A slight decline in the strength of the privately-owned seagoing U. S.-flag merchant fleet was reported for the month of October by the National Federation of American Shipping. As of 1 Nov., the private fleet consisted of a total of 1,174 vessels of 1,000 gross tons and over, aggregating 13,991,000 deadweight tons. This is contrasted with 1,178 vessels of 14,033,000 deadweight tons on 1 Oct. The present privately-owned merchant fleet includes 726 dry cargo and combination vessels of 7,320,000 deadweight tons, and 448 tankers of 6,671,000 deadweight tons. The Federation attributed the decrease to the scrapping of two outmoded ore carriers, and the removal of two overage tankers to storage use only.

The actively employed American Merchant fleet registered a moderate downward trend during October with 1,368 vessels listed in active service as of 1 Nov., compared with 1,378 on 1 Oct. During the month of October there were 191 government-owned vessels under bareboat charter, representing no change over the previous month. In addition, there were listed some 48 vessels under General Agency Agreement, all of which were inactive; 47 of these vessels are undergoing repairs but will not be activated until further needs develop. At the same time, the number of vessels in the National Defense Reserve Fleet, excluding tugs, concrete ships, and military auxiliaries, decreased last month from 2,046 to 2,019 reflecting the additional 25 Victories ordered repaired in the reserve fleet. World War II built tankers remained unchanged at 24, while World War II dry cargo and combination vessels decreased from 1,986 to 1,960, of which 1,604 are Liberty type and 110 are Victories. Overage dry cargo vessels in reserve decreased from 46 to 35, it was noted.

Committee on Navigation

Changes of membership in the Committee on Navigation of the Department of Defense Research and Development Board were announced on 30 Nov. by Dr. Hector R. Skifter, chairman of the committee.

Mr. Frederick B. Lee, Deputy Administrator, Civil Aeronautics Administration, has been appointed member of the committee to represent the Department of Commerce. He succeeds Delos W. Rentzel.

Mrs. David D. Thomas, Program Planning Officer, CAA, has been named Mr. Lee's deputy on the committee.

Capt. L. F. Dodson, USN, Office Chief of Naval Operations, has been named a Navy member of the committee to succeed Capt. Robert C. Sutliff.

Completing the membership of the committee are Mr. Donald G. Fink, Editor-in-Chief Electronics, McGraw-Hill Publishing Company, New York City; Mr. Norman L. Winter, Sperry Gyroscope Company, Great Neck, Long Island, N. Y., and the following service and government representatives: Army: Col. E. R. Petzinger, USA; Air Force: Col. James H. Rothrock, USAF; U.S. Coast Guard: Capt. R. M. Ross, USCG; and Mr. Ralph S. Damon, chairman, Air Navigation Development Board.

Distinguished Graduates

The Army expects to release next month a list containing the names of between 500 and 600 Distinguished Military Graduates who will complete college and university courses in June 1951.

Sees Trade as Aid to Defense

Free nations must increase their production of critical materials to strengthen their defense effort, it was emphasized this week by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The Chamber made public a statement by its board of directors, pointing out that a large volume of international trade will furnish production incentives necessary to maintain industrial output adequate to the requirements of the countries banded together to oppose aggression.

The Chamber board's statement was based on a report made by its Committee on Foreign Commerce, of which Richard L. Bowditch, of Boston, is chairman. Excerpts from the statement follow:

"The free nations cannot hope to defend themselves with military forces alone. Thus, economic strength is essential to military preparedness, that in turn is dependent to a great extent on multilateral, unrestricted trading among free nations."

"In the face of the present emergency, we are far more in need of foreign goods than ever before. For this reason, every effort must be made to fill as much as possible requirements from abroad in order that we may receive those imports so necessary for our own economy and as incentive for increased production . . ."

"Export control administrators must distribute limited supplies among exporters equitably, and in so doing seek the advice of private industry groups in formulating and applying policies and procedures. They must distribute limited quotas among countries equitably, with due consideration for what the United States gets in return. The quid pro quo rule must apply."

"Recognized as temporary expeditives, justified only by the contribution they make to the national security, controls must assure that vital defense goods do not get into the hands of potential aggressors. Our government should utilize its substantial bargaining powers to implement agreements for effective parallel action on export controls with all friendly nations, particularly those which are receiving our economic aid and sharing in our supplies of scarce products."

The Chamber's Board of Directors approved another statement by its Foreign Commerce Committee which contended that a single unified foreign assistance program is urgently needed to assure maximum contribution to a common defense effort and to keep costs to a minimum.

The single program, the Chamber said, should be applicable on a flexible basis to any part of the world as circumstances may require, but under definite legislative prescriptions as to purpose, policies, and methods.

Tax Aid for Defense

Chairman Stuart Symington of the National Security Resources Board announced this week that he had signed and issued the first necessity certificates designed to encourage the expansion of production capacity for defense purposes.

Eight such certificates were issued in this first action under Section 124A of the Internal Revenue Act of 1950 which provides for accelerated tax amortization on facilities expanded for defense work. All of the certificates were issued to Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp., and involved new facilities estimated to cost approximately $144,000,000. The proposed expansion will, according to the company, result in the increase of steel ingot capacity by 1,200,000 tons, coke and related by-products by 266,400 tons, and electrolytic tin plate by 168,000 tons.

Many other companies, including steel companies, have made application to take advantage of the tax provision and will likewise receive decisions within a short time.
